MEXICO SEIZES RICH ALIEN PROPERTY

CONFISCATORY LAW ENFORCED THEIR OIL LANDS TAKEN OVER

Calle Government Playing a Dangerous Hand Messing With Property of Foreigners—Confiscation Is a Sop To the Common People To Popularize His Administration—Catholic Revolt Is Crushed In the State of Coahuila—Priest Killed.

The first action in the Mexican courts over the new petroleum law—application for an injunction—has been initiated at Tampico by four American oil companies seeking protection of certain of their property rights. This course adopted by the oil companies has the complete support of the Mexican government, Attorney General Ortega said Sunday, adding that President Calles does not intend to place any obstacle in the path of the oil companies in having recourse to the courts.

Meanwhile the war department asserts that "the Catholic rebellion" has been crushed in the state of Coahuila and that rebels and bandits are being mopped up in other states about 100 of them having been killed in skirmishes in various sections in the last few days.

Tampico dispatches explain that the Mexican government's petroleum agency has granted to a third party, Aniceto Torres, a concession to certain lands of the Sinclair Oil Co., on which this company has not filed application for a renewal of the concession under the new petroleum law. The Sinclair company thereupon filed in the Tampico district court an "amparo," which the court provisionally accepted pending a subsequent ruling.

An amparo can take the form of a mandamus, or an injunction. It is an application for a short decree either ordering or restraining certain action and also can become equivalent to a writ of habeas corpus.

The Tampico dispatches also announce that the Aguila Transcontinental and Agwi companies have ceased work in the southern fields and have filed amparos because certain drilling permits have been cancelled.

No explanation is given, but it is assumed that the cancellations had been made effective because the companies had not complied with the law requiring application for the new concessions.

Sixty rebels have been killed in fights, according to the war department or newspaper dispatches, by the federals at several points in the state of Coahuila. The federals, it is declared, captured anti-government pronouncements signed by the league for the defense of religious liberty and Rene Capistran Garza, the league leader who was recently said to have been proclaimed provisional president of Mexico and appeals to "the army of Christ and King."

Thirty or 40 rebels have been killed by the federals in several engagements in the state of Jalisco. Press dispatches report that one Catholic priest was found among the dead.

Mexico City newspapers give the great prominence to all dispatches showing opposition anywhere in the world to the United States Nicaraguan and Mexican policies, and print much editorial comment from the United States.

Special dispatches from Merida, Yucatan, describes a great mass meeting which endorsed the foreign and domestic policies of President Calles and cheered enthusiastically when the governor of Yucatan attacked the policy of the United States in Latin America. He declared that "Mexicans would rather die than be enslaved by Wall street."

A national political campaign practically has been started thru the activity of the friends of the former President General Obregon, who are organizing in many places with the object of electing Obregon to the presidency to succeed Calles. This adds to the generally unsettled condition of the country. Most of the Mexican City newspapers declare that the country has sufficient turmoil on its hands at present and that it is premature to enter upon a presidential campaign.

The present controversy over oil rights in Mexico "arises directly from the efforts and purposes of the Mexican government to despoil the American owners of these properties and rights" declares the Association of Producers of Petroleum in Mexico in a letter to Senator Burton K. Wheeler in Washington.

The letter, which is signed by Guy Stevens, director of the association, was in answer to statements which have been attributed to the senator in the course of discussion on the Latin-American situation.

No American companies are operating in Mexico under "concessions," the letter asserts, but under positive ownership thru purchase or lease of oil lands prior to 1917. At that time ownership of petroleum deposits was held by owners of the land under Mexican laws then in force.

The issue presented to the U. S. government in 1918 is revived in the recent action of the Mexican president the association's director contends. He characterizes the move as a step in the Mexican government's purpose to "consummate the spoliation thru the enactment of the present petroleum law."

President Wilson's declaration in 1918 to President Carranza, "calling the attention of the Mexican government to the necessity which may arise to impel it (the American government) to protect the property of its citizens in Mexico divested or injuriously affected by the decree," is cited.

Mr. Stevens offers to furnish any information which the senator may desire, or to go to Washington to discuss the situation.

A similar letter, setting forth the same declaration, was sent to Senator J. Thomas Heflin of Alabama.

Little Cannibalism Now

Cannibalism still exists in some tropical countries, but is limited to the area comprising the country 10 degrees north and south of the equator. It is found among isolated South American tribes, in West Equatorial and Central Africa, the Malay archipelago, certain South Sea islands, mainly in Melanesia, and in parts of Australia. Head hunting tribes are found in Madagascar.

Cincinnati — Three deaths in two weeks is the tragic record in the name of George H. Montor.

His wife, Mrs. Anna L. Montor, died New Year's day.

Cincinnati — Fire which yesterday swept an apartment in the Hyde Park district here drove 18 families out into near zero weather and caused damage estimated at $250,000. Mrs. Anna Holden, confined to her bed recovering from a broken hip was rescued by fire men who climbed to the fourth floor with the aid of ladders.

Columbus—Patrick Kelley, 76, retired chief of the Columbus police department died at his home last night of heart trouble after a year's illness.

Columbus — A stomach pump was necessary to revive Frank Alexander, Westerville, brought to a local hospital suffering from the effects of poison liquor, it is said. He told police that he was "in a party somewhere on west Eleventh avenue" in Columbus, and added that $40 had been stolen from him.

Dayton—An investigation was to be made today of the crash between a traction car and an automobile yesterday in which three were killed and five others injured, two of whom may die.

INSURANCE AGENTS.

Lawrence J. Johnson, of the Boyle & Johnson Insurance agency, left Monday to attend the annual convention of Agents of the Ohio Farmers Insurance Co., held at the home office at LeRoy, Ohio, Thursday and Wednesday.

Don't Count on an Encore

N. W. writes: "Keep something in reserve. Many performers make their biggest hit on an encore." That looks pretty clever, but we don't know exactly to apply it in actual life. One's best acts are often none too good; we should say, rather: Put the finest that's in you in everything you do. You may not get an encore, anyway.—Boston Transcript.

GEORGE YOUNG CRAWLSTROKE SWIMMER WON

Only One to Finish 22 Mile
Derby and Will Get the
$25,000 Prize.

George Young, 17 year old crawl-stroke artist of Toronto, Canada, who made his way to California on a motorcycle to participate in the William Wrigley marathon swim across the San Pedro channel, offset the chilling waters of the passage with a flashing stroke of speed that averaged 54 minutes to win the deep sea Derby in 15 hours and 45 minutes.

He was the only finisher in the field of 102 official contestants in the race which started at 11:21 a. m. Saturday at the isthmus of the northeast end of Santa Catalina island.

Sunday morning at 3:06 o'clock he gained the rock-storm shores of Point Vicente, a short distance north.

Veterans of long distance and channel swimming fame fell by the wayside overcome by the frigid waters of the channel, but this youthful marvel holder of the Canadian amateur long distance championship, continued his speedy stroking across the 22-mile course to the triumph and a $25,000 prize offered by Wrigley for the first man to cross.

BOOTLEGGERS HOOTCH GUN LATEST THING

It appears that each week ushers in an addition to the bootleg industry. The latest is the "three-shot" hooch-gun.

It is made to resemble perfectly a blue steel automatic pistol and will hold three man sized shots of liquor. It was introduced by a man who strolled into a downtown restaurant in Cleveland and levelled the gun at an unsuspecting waiter. The waiter fled in alarm, only to be greeted by shout of derisive laughter as the man divulged the contents of the pistol.

It is believed the gun is manufactured by the makers of the whisky tester, a device used in determining whether whisky is pure or poisonous.

PARALYSIS.

John R. Miller, 74, of Columbus, formerly of this city, suffered a stroke of paralysis last Wednesday and his condition is critical. Mr. Miller is a brother-in-law of Mrs. William Crisinger, of this city.

M'CULLOUGH RE-ELECTED.

L. P. McCullough, president of the Puckeye State Building & Loan company, 22 West Gay street, Columbus, was re-elected to the office at the annual meeting of the stockholders Friday, while Robert Livingston, Allen R. Rankin, Ben J. Throop, Ollie Gibson and Harry H. Price were re-elected directors for the next three years.

Outlook for next year's business are exceedingly bright, McCullough said, in view of the $34,000,000 assets in the company and the policy of the company since its founding.

Directors of Friday's meeting, whose terms did not expire this year and who continue to hold office, were C. C. Guthrie, Frank Rathmell, George W. Knight, B. C. Blachley, Fred C. Rector, W. J. Wilber, Dr. A. O. Ross and Elmer Jones.

Bureau Makes Record in Measurement of Time

Washington.—The measurement of time to an accuracy of from one to two hundred thousandths of a thousand has been effected by the bureau of standards.

The measurement is ten times as fine as obtained by any previous method, bureau experts said. In physics research the measurement is believed to be of great value, as it is estimated that light travels nearly two miles in one hundred thousandth of a second.

A tuning fork, a pendulum swinging in a vacuum, a photoelectric cell, an oscillograph or tiny mirror mounted on two wires in a strong magnetic field, and a high speed camera constituted the measuring apparatus.

New "Spender"

New York—A new type of Broadway "spender" was described in a local court. He is alleged to have taken his feminine companions to the morgue for entertainment and to have presented them with forged checks.

PROPERTIES OF CANNERIES AT AUCTION

Sears & Nichols Plants at
Sale Bring Only Half of
Their Estimated Value.

At the foreclosure sale of the Ohio properties owned by the Sears & Nichols Canning company, held in the probate court room, Saturday, John E. Morley, Cleveland attorney representing the First Mortgage Bondholders' Protective committee was sold the following mortgaged properties on the bid as stated, subject to confirmation by U. S. District Judge Benson Hough.

Washington C. H. plant, $60,000; Circleville, Ohio, plant $100,000; Chillicothe factory, including Main street plant, warehouses on Riverside and Race street, $175,000; Frankfort plant $30,000, total bidding of $365,000. The committee bids were all at the upset price, the figures fixed by the court as the minimum the plants must bring. The "upset" price on the plants as an entirety was $485,000.

The Protective committee made the following offers for personal property to be submitted to the court for approval: Washington C. H., $8,872; Circleville, $15,699; Chillicothe, $19,182; Frankfort, $5,188; Central Supply store, Chillicothe, $8,205; general office supplies $9,431; labels, advertising good will, trade-marks and patent rights, $40,000. The good will had an estimated value of $50,000. These offers were approximately fifty per cent of the estimated value, but the actual sale is held pending the approval of the court. They total $106,777, the personality upset figure being $245,000.

If the court confirms the above sales and the offers for personal property, the first mortgage bondholders intend operating their plants themselves, providing financial arrangements can be made to raise sufficient working capital. Confirmation would mean that the above plants pass into the ownership of some 400 bondholders. They are contemplating no re-sale of the properties, if awarded to them, but will undertake the operation thru their own organization.

Judge Benson Hough of the U. S. district court Saturday ordered a continuance of the foreclosure sale of Sears & Nichols Ohio properties to January 29, at the Chillicothe courthouse 10 a. m.

HOW DOCTOR WORKS
SELF OUT OF JOB

The medical profession is the only one where good and efficient work tends to reduce the prosperity of those in it, says Medical News. The plumber does a good job, but corrosion is his ally and soon he must come back to repair the pipe he installed last year. The lawyer wins the case, gets paid for writing up the agreement and makes more work for himself by writing it in such a way that, in case of dispute, he alone can interpret what he has done.

But the good and worthy doctor cheats himself every time he does a good job. He improves the sanitary system of a town—and loses a few hundred potential typhoid cases. He discovers, as Pasteur did, the germ theory, and immediately reduces his number of future customers.

All of which is good, right and proper, and in perfect accord with the noble and high aims of the profession. But doctors tell us it is getting tougher and tougher every day to make a living, to say nothing of a competence, in a field where good work cuts down the chances for future livelihood.

Five hundred and fifty men, rated as worth a thousand millions to their company and actually insured for several millions, sail from New York, Jan. 23, for Havana, the pilgrimage marking the peak of the "go-getter" program inaugurated by John H. Patterson many years ago when he started out to build up the National Cash Register Co.

Strong for Self-Support

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

"YOU saw my father?" Amy anticipated eagerly.

"Yes, I saw your father," admitted Peter, somewhat morosely. "His objection was certainly original."

Amy and Peter sat tete-a-tete at a little tea room in a city side street where they had met to talk things over after Peter's call on Mr. Mellon. Amy's father, the purpose of which was the formal request for the hand of his daughter.

"Then he didn't say it would be all right?" asked Amy.

"He didn't say in so many words that I couldn't ever marry you, but he did say you couldn't marry me or any one else—I was glad he said that—until you had shown yourself capable of supporting yourself. I never heard of such a thing. Never asked me what I was earning, though I'd have been glad enough to show him my weekly check and my bank book. Had them ready to show him if he asked. But—well, I never heard of a father naming such an objection."

"Of course it's unusual," excused Amy, "but you know father has rather advanced ideas about some things. He thinks every woman should be educated to earn her own way. I suppose it is because, as a lawyer, he has often known of women, used to luxuries, who when their husbands died or left them or something haven't been able to do anything to earn a living. It's terrible to be a dependent—especially when you're married—and maybe have children."

"Well, I told him I'd planned to take out a big life insurance. And I'll put my savings in government bonds—"

"I know, but father says that he's known of cases where every sort of security was swept away. The only sort of real security, he says, is knowing how to earn your own living. And somehow I just don't seem to be able to do it, Peter," said Amy, looking across the table with tearful eyes. "I think I must be stupid. You know I tried nursing, and honestly I couldn't stand it. And I never finished high school so I couldn't get into normal college to learn to be a teacher. Then I took a business course—but I just can't stand shorthand. Oh, dear, Peter, I couldn't begin to tell you the things I've thought of—and tried and failed at. But I'll try, Peter."

That night Peter told his mother of his interview with Amy's father and mother listened at first with amazement and then with amusement. She made no comment, however, save to say that Amy was a dear girl and it would be a shame for her to have to go to work just to humor the whim of her father. That evening she telephoned to Mr. Mellon and asked him if he would dine with her at her house the following evening. Since their children had become such good friends she thought they, too, ought to renew their old acquaintance.

Mrs. Drew arranged to have her son Peter dine at his club the following evening and gave orders to her cook for the best possible dinner. It was after they had finished and had gone to the cozy little drawing room to drink their coffee that Mrs. Drew first mentioned Peter and Amy.

"You know, Bert," said Mrs. Drew, "my son is really quite in love with your daughter Amy. I believe he wants to marry her. But I really cannot let him consider it—at least, not now. You see, I believe that no man ought to think of marrying unless he is perfectly able to keep house for himself. I've known of several cases where young men were left widowers with children. They have had to send their children to boarding schools and homes because they haven't been able to keep house and take care of the children themselves. So I've said for some time now that I should never allow my Peter to marry until he had taken a course in domestic science and baby tending. And Peter simply won't do it. All right, I say, then you must remain a bachelor or marry without my consent."

"I'm sure, Alice, that is a most absurd theory of yours. Amy is in the best of health—she wouldn't leave Peter a widower, and besides Peter could afford to get a governess and a housekeeper—but it's so absurd to talk about such a thing—"

"Not absurd at all," persisted Mrs. Drew.

There was a protracted pause, during which each waited to see what the other would say next. Then Bert Mellon began to chuckle.

"Alice," he said, "I believe you've been kidding me. But don't let's talk about Amy and Peter. I guess it will be all right about them. I'll give in if you will. But what I want to talk about is ourselves. Alice, I've been alone now for six years—and you?"

"Twelve years," supplied Alice Drew.

"And you know I wanted to marry you when I was a boy—or if you didn't know it was because I was too shy to tell you. But I'm not too shy now, Alice. After Peter and Amy are married—let's just run away somewhere and get married, too."

Peculiar Mirage

Fata Morgana is a striking kind of mirage seen in the strait of Messina and elsewhere in Italy. A spectator on the shore sees images of people, houses, ships, etc., sometimes in the water, sometimes in the air; there are sometimes two images of the same object, one inverted.

What's Wrong With This Picture

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton in the Edward Sutherland Production "We're in the Navy Now" A Paramount Picture

What's wrong with this picture? Nothing at all!

From a technical point of view, one involving regulations of the United States Navy, the final "O. K." has been put on the funniest of war films, Paramount's "We're in the Navy Now."

The verdict is that of E. W. Paynter, ex-lieutenant, senior grade, U. S. N., a veteran of fifteen years continuous service. Paynter was employed during the filming of "We're in the Navy Now" to eliminate all possibility of misinterpreting the true phases of naval life and regulations. Paynter served aboard Admiral

Simm's flagship during the World War.

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, the stars, portray the intimate lives of two gobs in "We're in the Navy Now" with the aid of one of the strongest comedy casts ever assembled. Chester Conklin and Tom Kennedy are featured.

Edward Sutherland, who directed Beery and Hatton in Paramount's doughboy screen scream, "Behind the Front," also produced their latest achievement. It comes to the Metropolitan on Wednesday next.

Food for Squirrels

The food of squirrels in the wild state includes, according to the time of the year, nuts and seeds, buds, mushrooms, insects, nestling birds and fleshy fruits. In feeding caged squirrels it is necessary that they be given regularly some hard-shelled nuts, such as hickory nuts or butternuts, to keep their ever-growing incisor teeth firm in their sockets.

Flying Fish Luckless

The flying fish is a somewhat luckless creature, though it travels with almost equal facility under the water or in the air. When pursued by larger fish these oceanic monoplanes leap above the surface of the water, spreading their wings and soaring above the waves for many yards, but during their flight they are easy prey for gulls, says Daniel Henderson in "Children of the Tide."

Making Amber Workable

Most of the amber we get in this country in the way of pipe stems, cigar and cigarette holders and strings of beads of the cheaper variety are pressed amber. The better grades and larger pieces either stay in Europe or go to the East. By gradually heating amber in an oil bath it becomes soft and flexible. Thus it is rendered workable.

French Police Take Trio In Effort to Wipe Out International Gang of Thieves.

Paris, Jan. 14.—Continuing their efforts to clean up an alleged band of international thieves, police today arrested three Americans who, they stated, were connected with three confidence workers arrested yesterday.

Those taken into custody today gave their names as Mrs. Mary Hines, Thomas and Charles Keller, of Chicago, and Lee Davis of Kansas City. They carried false American passports, police declared, and were known under many aliases.

Those arrested yesterday were Edward Charles Stanley, his wife, Claire Morgan Stanley, and Dudley Stone.

Police charge the "Stanley gang" worked a straight orthodox confidence game and inveigled a wealthy Dutchman into placing $70,000 into their hands.

Wife-Lending Disputes Keep Isle 'King' Busy

San Francisco.—Disputes arising over the strange racial custom of wife-lending take much of the time of the king of Washington island.

Washington island, a coral atoll in the midst of the Pacific ocean, near Fanning island, is inhabited by a hundred Gilbertese blacks, imported by a British company from the Gilbert islands to work coconut plantations.

There are only two white men on the island. One is Harry G. Glenn, the "king," and manager. The other is his assistant, the "prime minister."

Wife-lending is a native way of combating matrimonial ennui, says Glenn. When a husband and wife tire of each other, the man lends his spouse to a friend for a time, her consent being necessary, however. Often the friend is a young bachelor who has boarded with the family.

RICH MAN DIES BEFORE CASTLE IS COMPLETED

Medieval Mansion on Lonely Mountain Crag Shunned by Girl Who Inherited Millions.

New York.—High up in the Catskill mountains, in Sullivan county, New York, is an unfinished dream castle, a veritable mansion of medieval days, a monument to a king of finance who died before his dream was finished.

This huge stone castle with its turrets and battlements belongs to Miss Muriel Wurts-Dundas, New York city and Philadelphia society girl, but it was through no wish of hers the place was built.

Rather it was her father, Ralph H. Wurts-Dundas, student and athlete, who carried out the long cherished ambition of his childhood to build a mammoth castle on the towering crags of some mighty mountain.

Millions in abundance he had, but Mr. Wurts-Dundas could not beat death. When it came the mighty stone mansion was nearly finished, but now there is no one to fulfill the cherished vision.

Miss Wurts-Dundas prefers life in the city to a lonely existence on a bleak mountain top, so she allowed work on the castle to cease when her father died.

So there the 26-room castle stands today, its copper water pipes empty, its heating boilers cold, and its electric wires moldy and musty without and lifeless within.

Dead Chinese Thief Idolized as Martyr

Shanghai.—One of the most daring pieces of communistic plotting ever discovered in the Far East has just come to light here after an official investigation of the causes for the present perilous situation in Shanghai—a situation with 11,000 idle hands, daily riots, and almost hourly clashes between the strikers and the police.

The grave of a nameless thief is heaped with flowers, with rich foods for his spirit, with paper offerings proclaiming him a martyr.

But there never was a Chen Ah-dong. The dead man whose grave is venerated has never been identified.

The facts are these:

On August 3, a Japanese tramp freighter, the Manri Maru, put into port here. A nameless person, known to the river police for three years as a professional thief, stole a watch from the second mate and was chased by the Japanese members of the crew of the Manri Maru. He fell down an open hatch and was killed.

About August 10, stories began to appear in the Chinese newspapers here to the effect that Chen Ah-dong, a hawker, had gone to the Manri Maru to collect debts owed to him by members of the crew, and that his debtors had beaten him to death.

Skeleton Points to Old Crime in California

Pasadena, Calif.—Murder was done in a little-frequented mountain canyon northwest of Pasadena, local detectives believe, following the finding by workmen of a human skeleton lying in some underbrush, with what appears to be a bullet hole through its skull. The skeleton is believed to have lain in the spot ten or fifteen years.

The remains are those of a man, it was determined by the finding of a man's shoe and clothes buttons besides the bones. All other traces of clothing have disappeared and part of the skull and numerous bones have disappeared in the years that intervened between the death and its discovery.

Joe Maxwell, employee of the Clarence P. Day corporation, which is building a new road through the canyon, found the gruesome evidence of the old crime and called the Pasadena police. Detective Lieutenants Kaighin and Decker went to the spot and brought the skeleton to the police station.

Poison Ivy Hit Colonists

Poison ivy was one of the first aggravating pests found in the new world when the Colonists first came to America. In fact, Capt. John Smith, as early as 1609, wrote of having found it, and gave a very accurate description in some of his records of the effect of the weed. Strangely enough, he was never poisoned by it himself, but saw the sufferings of others on a number of occasions.

FLORIDA TRIES TO UNSCRAMBLE TITLES

Courts Are Swamped by Real Estate Cases.

Miami, Fla.—Unscrambling the tangled financial and property title mess that developed in the "Binder" period a year ago, in the refinancing and bonding period a few months later and in the deferred payment default period of the last ten months, now is occupying practically the whole time of the courts and realty tribunals in Florida, writes Putney Haight in the Chicago Tribune.

Solid pages of "service by publication" summonses in foreclosure proceedings are appearing in daily and weekly newspapers, in spite of the fact that a general policy had been adopted by the more substantial development concerns to extend time on deferred payments for lands for a year or two at least.

Real Estate Tangles.

Most of the actions now being instituted are not exactly what they appear to be on the face of the title, attorneys say. Complainants in a great majority of cases appear as the minor firms and corporations which sprang into being at the height of the boom and sprang out when the boom subsided. They left commitments to pay for tracts of land used for subdivision on one hand, and deferred payment contracts of buyers on the other. Now the original owners of the tracts are trying to clear up titles to their property.

Suits are started against lot buyers to foreclose because of defaulted payments in the name of the concern which sold the lots. It may be years before property titles are straightened out if the present procedure is followed, as the foreclosure actions in Dade county alone are said to be 15,000 to 20,000, though no accurate figures are available at present from the court records.

It is likely that the next legislature will be asked to pass a statute under which it will be possible to clear property titles by affidavit and notice. The exact method has not been worked out as yet, but experts are engaged in framing a simple way to avoid the growing avalanche of court proceedings.

The "service-by-publication" phase of the foreclosure will, in the opinion of Florida lawyers, work no great hardship, for they hold that practically all those suits are against buyers who purchased property with a down payment as a gamble, and who believed, to some extent at least, the salesmen who promised to resell the property within ninety days at a profit. When, at the end of ninety days the property was not resold, the buyer would merely "forget it," and take his loss, the Floridians assume.

Suit at Law Necessary.

The buyer being out of the picture, however, does not affect the validity of the nondomic cloud on the property title, and to remove it suit at law is necessary. Most one-payment buyers will never know or bother to find out what steps were taken to remove their equities, as personal service is scarcely ever attempted in these suits unless the defendant is in the county or city where action is started.

Some, however, will know it when judgments for deficiency in foreclosure proceedings are forwarded to the "home towns" for collection.

The question of foreclosure deficiency judgments is just now the subject of much discussion through Florida, as many leading Floridians are of the opinion that enforcements of payments upon notes and contracts given during the hectic boom days will leave such a bad taste in the mouth of the northern portion of the country as to produce a detrimental effect here for years to come. Others, urge the right to exact the pound of flesh. Their logic is based on the theory that the boom times buyers were gambling and would have taken a profit, had it materialized, and therefore are in duty bound to take a loss when that has come.

Not only in land titles is the unscrambling process going on, but also in high finance circles, where much distrust has developed in recent months.

Here's a Championship That Hasn't Been Lost

Albany.—New York, champion cabbage-growing state of the Union, raised 305,100 tons of that vegetable this year, an increase of 16,700 over 1925, said a state federal crop report issued by the department of farms and markets.

"Although the output of domestic, or early, cabbage in New York was much lighter than usual," the report said, "the late or Danish crop is enough larger to make the total production greater than in 1925, due chiefly to the increase in acreage of the Danish variety."

The amount of the latter type harvested this year is estimated at 204,800 tons, as compared with 153,300 tons last season.

On Cash Basis

Washington.—The army is doing business on a cash basis, virtually all of its bills being paid monthly, a financial report of the military service revealed.

Rail Revenue Drops

London.—Revenue of the four great railways of England decreased by £25,000,000 during the six months of the coal stoppage.

C. BIRKHEAD OVERCOME BY MONOXIDE GAS

Message Sent For Pulmometer—Department Came With Fire Apparatus.

The alarm of fire rung in from box 25 Sunday at noon was a false alarm. The fire department was asked over the telephone to bring the pulmometer to the home of H. S. Leist, of 353 Union street to be used to resuscitate Curtis Birkhead, who had become unconscious from inhaling monoxide gas in the garage of Mr. Leist.

It seems that Mr. Leist and Mr. Birkhead had been working on the former's auto. Mr. Leist had started to go to dinner but turned around around when he heard something fall. He saw Mr. Birkhead lying prostrate on the floor and realizing something was wrong, he hurried to the garage and saw that the fallen man was overcome. He called Harry Hitchcock who lives close by and they carried Mr. Birkhead outside and worked with him until he was restored to consciousness. In the meantime a call was sent to the fire department for the pulmometer, but it was not needed. Dr. Lloyd Jones attended the gassed man and he is now considered out of danger.

HARTMAN THEATER.

"The Poor Nut, heralded as the greatest of all college comedies, will be the attraction at the Hartman theater, Columbus, on next Monday, January 17, for an engagement of a week only. The comedy comes direct from 20 weeks at the Cort theater in Chicago. It enjoyed sensational success in New York for 42 weeks, in Boston for 10 weeks and in Philadelphia for eight weeks.

Patterson McNutt, the young producer, has mounted the play handsomely, and the famous stadium scene which stumped other Broadway managers, is staged so realistically that it has been the talk of critics and playgoers alike wherever the comedy has been presented.

Elliott Nugent, an Ohio boy and an Ohio State alumnus, plays the central character and is co-author of the play with his father, J. C. Nugent. Others plays by the Nugents include "Kempy," "The Trouper," "The Rising Sun" and "Gunpowder."

"The Poor Nut" deals with the rollicking adventures of John Miller, an Ohio State junior, who would rather earn $1200 yearly as a professor of botany than be a business man at an annual salary of $12,000. A Wisconsin university girl, however, thinks differently, and armed with letters in which he had confessed his desire to become a popular hero, she takes him in hand, psycho-analyzes him and starts the newly made hero off in a gale of hilarious difficulties.

The stadium scenes in the second act have caused much praise and acclaim from critics and followers of college athletics. The relay race has been described as being "As thrilling as all the chariots of 'Ben Hur.'"

The cast for the Ohio tour is the original company, and an especially large one for a dramatic play. Supporting Nugent are Norma Lee, Betty Garde, Percy Helton, Beach Cook, Frazer Coulter, Larry Fletcher, Harry Gresham, Thomas Sherer, Eric Kalkhurst, Cornelius Roddy, and a score of other well known players. Matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

AMUSEMENTS

Complications which can follow in the wake of a well intended deception are defined with rare humor in the Columbia comedy, "When the Wife's Away," adapted from the story by Douglas Bronston, which comes to the Met theater Monday for two days.

While the picture makes no attempt to point out a moral it directs an uproarious laugh on selfishness, intolerance and narrow mindedness.

The story is that of a couple who skip along on a meager income and suddenly come into a fortune with a string attached to it. The string requires that they must have "made good" before they are eligible for the cash.

They launch deception to influence the executor and the succeeding complications involve friends, relatives, Chicago crooks and finally the police. At length the tangled condition of affairs is straightened and they acquire the fortune. There the picture ends, leaving the audience to wonder whether they found true happiness with the new wealth after all.

George K. Arthur, as Billy Winthrop, the young husband who impersonates a butler one moment and a female companion for his wife the next, obviously has a trying role. Dorothy Revier is the clever little wife.

Others in the supporting cast are Tom Ricketts, Ned Sparks, Harry Depp, Lincoln Plummer, Bobbie Dunn and Ina Rorke. The picture was directed by Frank B. Strayer, who has been turning out a series of first-rate pictures for Columbia.

While he strove to keep before him the fact that this was a farce comedy, Strayer at the same time insisted on plausibility and natural acting. As a result, according to advance reviews, the film is unmarred by forced comedy, and impossible situations.

De Laval Oil

Don't experiment with various kinds of oil to lubricate your De Laval Separator. There is just one brand of oil which is exactly suited to the purpose, and hundreds of brands which will not do at all.

Keep the oil cup of your separator filled with De Laval oil and you will get the utmost in separator satisfaction. The machine will turn easier, and give longer and better service.

All light, high-speed machines run better when lubricated with De Laval oil. It gives them the protection they need and is, therefore, the cheapest oil in the end.

Sold in half-gallon and one gallon sealed cans, with a handy spout.

OHIO CITY

Wants Federal Building Per Secretary of Chamber of Commerce.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15.—Bucyrus is raising its stentorian voice in an insistent demand that it shall not be overlooked when the public building melon is being cut. Take it from E. J. Songer, secretary of the Bucyrus chamber of commerce, that Bucyrus wants a public building.

"This is the largest city in the Eighth Congressional district that does not have a postoffice building," he writes to Senator Willis. "The income of the office is sufficient to justify the erection of a government building here and the importance of the city as a manufacturing center seems to recommend it to those who have the decision on this matter."

"There are few cities in Ohio the size of Bucyrus which have not been favored by the government in the matter of a postoffice building."

"Politically, this county was very good to you and this community is the home of Senator J. R. Hopley, who carried the banner of the Republican party this year in an effort to put a Republican in congress from this old Harding district."

Senator Willis is touched by the appeal. In his reply to the letter from the chamber of commerce secretary, he says:

"In my judgment, Bucyrus has a splendid case for a new building. Personally, it will be very gratifying to me if we can work this matter out."

DISABLED VETERANS

At Government Hospital, Chillicothe, Entertained Thursday By Circleville Red Cross Chapter.

The second of a series of card parties sponsored by the local chapter of the American Red Cross was held on Thursday of this week at Government Hospital No. 97, Chillicothe, when Mrs. Orion King, Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker, Mrs. George Littleton, Mrs. R. R. Bales, Mrs. George Foresman, Mrs. Felix Caldwell, Mrs. W. P. Creed, Miss Irene Parrett, Miss Agnes Butch, of this city, Mrs. Geo. P. Hunsicker, Miss Drusie Heiskell, Mrs. John Smith and Mrs. Harry Dunlap, of Williamsport, were hostesses. At the conclusion of the card game with the patients in the recreational hall refreshments of cake, candy and cigarettes were served.

This was also the occasion for a party for closed ward No. 2 where Miss Mary K. Dill, director of Red Cross work at the hospital was assisted by Miss Helen Van Meter, of Chillicothe, Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker and Miss Agnes Butch of this city.

A musical program by Mrs. Dard Hunter, pianist and Mrs. Fred Cook, violinist, of Chillicothe, was thoroughly enjoyed at this ward.

WELL MAKES DESERT SPOT INTO GARDEN

Is the Lowest Depression in All America.

Stovepipe Wells, Death Valley, Calif. —Where 77 years ago the starving, thirst-parched Jayhawker party here sipped a life-saving draught from a shallow waterhole and eagerly gnawed a piece of ox-hoof, merrymakers dined and danced in celebration of the formal opening of a new 24,000-barrel artesian well in this desert oasis.

Stovepipe Wells, in the heart of Death Valley, is the lowest depression in America, being 278 feet below sea level.

With the opening of the well, it is being developed as a sight-seeing resort, being linked to Mount Whitney by a road piercing the Panamint mountains.

It was on November 23, 1849, that the Jayhawker party, led by W. Lewis Manly and Tom Rogers, first sighted the shallow water hole of Stovepipe Wells and took back the good news to the Bennett and Arcane families with their four suffering children, who had been left behind when the unencumbered members of the party forged on, through the desert sands.

The meager bit of water which seeped through the sands saved the adventurers who had staked their lives in the gamble for California gold.

The new well, with its 1,000 barrels of water an hour, has made possible hotels, resort homes, fruit and flowers where pioneers found a crater of broiling sand.

EUROPE'S FARMS LEAD IN THE USE OF ELECTRICITY

Far Ahead of Those of Midwest United States, Says Minnesota "Ag" Man.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 14.—Midwest farmers now making only limited use of electrical power, would do well to study the development of electricity for farm use as is done in Europe, E. A. Stewart, of the Minnesota college of Agriculture said upon his return here from a trip to Europe.

Mr. Stewart, who is with the engineering division, made extensive investigations in Europe while on a vacation there, and says that from 60 to 70 per cent of the farms of Germany have electric service, from 40 to 45 per cent in Sweden, 40 per cent in Norway, 25 per cent in Denmark, 10 per cent in Switzerland and 5 per cent in France.

"German's leadership," he declares, "is attributed to the fact that most of the German farmers live in small villages. This has made it possible to reach their houses with electric service at moderate cost. In spite of the fact that the service centers in villages, many thousands of threshing rigs are driven by electric motors."

Sweden seems to lead in the number of electrically driven threshing machines. Mr. Stewart says it has been estimated that 50,000 such machines are in use in Sweden.

"The next common use of electric motors is for operating hay hoists," Stewart reports.

Architecture is the most ancient of the fine arts. The earliest dated architectural remains are those of the Babylonians, from as far back as 6000 B. C. Their building material was brick, and they were the first to construct vaults and arches.

FRESH SCANDAL IS DENIED BY LANDIS

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of base ball, exploded angrily today in denying that he was secretly investigating a new scandal in base ball—the 1922 world's series between the Giants and Yankees.

The commissioner said the first he knew about the latest three-reeler was when he read today's papers.

"There's nothing to it," he exclaimed.

"The stories are now being cooked up by the newspapers. They print the story in one edition and then deny it in the next.

"I'm getting tired spending all my time making denials to these silly stories.

"Some of these reporters will get themselves filled with stale beer, mince pie, and so, well—"

With that he banged up the receiver.

"WITCH" CRIMES FOUND IN INDIA

Police Run Down 23 Murders in Remote Districts of Country.

Calcutta.—Amazing crimes, many based on ignorance and belief in witchcraft, occur in the remote districts of Bihar and Orissa, India. Instances are recorded in the report, just issued, on the administration of the police in the province during 1925. Twenty-three murders were due to witchcraft.

In Shahabad a boy was murdered for the ornaments he was wearing. Enticed in and Slain.

In Saran a female hawker was enticed into a house on the pretext of showing her wares, and killed and robbed. In Muzaffarhur a village elha (exorciser) drove an iron into the head of a woman to liberate the evil spirit which was said to possess her. In Monghyr a gang of dacoits (thieves), being dissatisfied with the niggardly payments made by their receiver for stolen property sold to him, induced him to accompany them into a jungle, where they killed him. A caulkdar (watchman) in Jurl was killed by two suspects whom he was picketing.

In Hazaribagh a village priest enticed a boy into the jungle and sacrificed him to the village deity. In Manbhum a railway driver suspecting the perfidy of his wife, cut her throat and then committed suicide.

Seventeen Cases of Drugging.

Seventeen cases of professional drugging were reported to the criminal investigating department. In five cases from Saran a man, posing as an elha, on the pretext of curing ailments attributed to supernatural causes, administered poison to his patients and decamped with their belongings. In Saran a police constable poisoned two youthful relations, causing the death of one, in order to succeed to the property. A stranger drugged and robbed two persons who had upon their persons a large sum of money belonging to their employer. One of these persons died, and the culprit was hanged.

In Patna a man in the guise of a Sadhu (holy man) gave food to the residents of a temple, and, when they fell ill, stabbed the mahant (head priest). He failed in his object, which was robbery, but effected his escape.

Charmed Albino Buck Killed After 5 Years

Bellefonte, Pa.—Pre-season predictions that this would be the greatest year for deer in Centre county, now appear justified, and if "hunters' luck" continues on a par with the first few days of the open season the total kill will run far ahead of last year's aggregate of 500.

A hunting party of Hecla, which brought to earth a big albino buck, is confident it is the animal which has played hide and seek with so many hunters for four or five years.

Dozens of shots had been fired at it, but the buck seemed to bear a charmed life as it was never even brought to its knees. When they skinned the buck they found mute evidence of numerous punctures of the hide by bullet wounds, but none of them had been placed in a vital spot.

With all the bucks that have been killed during the first three days, only one deer has been brought to Bellefonte as an illegal kill, and the man who shot it blames it on an attack of rheumatism.

Indians in Far West Need Immediate Help

Omak, Wash.—Of the 2,700 Indians on the Colville reservation near here, half of them are in distress, bordering on starvation and need immediate assistance, reports W. S. Lewis, attorney for the tribe, just returned from an inspection trip there.

The present adversity of the Indians is not the fault of themselves nor the government. It has come from repeated crop failure, caused by droughts, grasshoppers, sandstorms and snowless winters.

The Colville Indians were among the first in the Northwest to take up agriculture and horticulture in earnest, once assuming great importance in their products. Then hard times struck them year after year. Some have cut up the orchard trees for fuel, others eaten their live stock. The young men and women have left for the cities seeking work.

Woman's Prayers Spur on Crew; All Saved

Norfolk, Va.—A woman's faith in prayer maintained the morale of the crew of ten men of the schooner Edna M. McKnight of Boston, while it was sinking 10 miles off Virginia capes. Mrs. A. Loesche, wife of the schooner's master, and the crew were brought here after they had been rescued by the British steamer Radner. The men attributed their rescue to her comforting words and prayers while they were working frantically at the pumps from Sunday to Tuesday with the ship partially submerged.

RECKLESSNESS AND REGULATION

Only a relatively small per cent of automobile drivers are careless.

But they are sufficient in number to make driving on the highway hazardous. On a Sunday or holiday many people refrain from driving because of the hazard. It is neither fair nor is it necessary that careless drivers should drive others off the highway, to which and on which everyone has an equal right.

Automobiles are safe, highways are safe and driving practices must be made safe.

An oil company, operating several hundred trucks has not had a collision or accident on the highways or at railroad grade crossings for a number of years, although during that time its trucks crossed railroad tracks more than 31,000,000 times.

It selects its drivers with proper care, instructs them in safe practices and gives them to understand that failure to stop, look and listen before crossing a railroad track, or failure properly to observe traffic rules and safe practices on the highways, will result in dismissal from the service.

It logically follows that public regulation of the same character would accomplish a like result, and with automobiles increasing in number, with proportional increase in congestion and hazard of accident, the point has been reached and the time has arrived for affirmative legislative action in this regard.

Growing Bison Herds Again Problem to U. S.

Philadelphia.—The crack of the guns of buffalo hunters, resounding recently in the fastnesses of the once wild West for the first time in forty years is a reminder that the American bison has come to represent a new problem for the government to solve.

In 1871, in spite of a slaughter estimated at as high as 3,000,000 yearly, a scout reported the migration of a single wedge-shaped herd moving on a 25-mile front, with a depth of 50 miles. The number of animals was estimated at 4,000,000.

It is the almost incredible truth that 18 years later a census of the continent of North America showed not more than 400 buffalo in a wild state and not more than 600 privately owned.

Conservationists in the United States and Canada got busy, and the government soon established herds on game preserves and passed protective laws.

The protected buffaloes, being among the hardest of wild things, increased and multiplied, until today they have become a drug on the market.

Now the ten herds owned by the United States are growing and overcrowding their range. Most of the zoos have been supplied with specimens. The numerous private herds have been eating their owners out of ranch and ranch home.

The Love of the Highbrows

By H. IRVING KING

(Copyright)

IT WAS delightful to see how perfectly Minerva Martin and William Minturn got on together—how perfectly they understood each other; just as two young people engaged—or as good as engaged—ought to. But then Minerva and William were not ordinary people; far from it. They were both "superior"; no sentimental and emotional nonsense about those two young highbrows—they dwelt in an atmosphere of pure reason and brought in teltect to bear upon all the relations of life.

As to marriage, they were agreed—after prolonged discussion—that while it was rather an antique institution it was well to preserve it as an antique. William had once collected old china; antiques had their place in life. Yes, the institution of marriage should be continued—as they proposed to continue it—calmly and deliberately.

How they laughed at the novelists and poets of the Scott and Byron era, and puffed the simple and uninformed writers of the Victorian era. Once Minerva caught William reading Byron. He looked as guilty as a New England boy of the last century caught reading a "dime novel," and explained with a blush that he was only trying to see to what depths of sentimental slush the human mind could descend. But William had his revenge; he caught Minerva reading Tennyson, and she had to explain that she had simply been amusing herself with the appalling shallowness of the Victorian mind.

Matters went along in this pleasant and highly satisfactory manner for—oh, a long time. Then, somehow, Pure Reason slipped a cog—and there was a disagreement. It is no matter what they quarreled over; it was some intensely complicated and profound subject which the reader would not understand if it were mentioned—any more than William and Minerva understood it. Suffice it that they parted, each disappointed in the intellectual capacity of the other. But they had so long been used to each other's society, so long accustomed to the intercourse of mind with mind, that they were both intensely unhappy.

"It is that infernal Tennyson that I caught her reading," thought William, "that has weakened the fiber of her strong and lucid mind."

"It's that awful Byron I saw him with that has ruined the symmetry of his once perfect intellect," sighed Minerva. Then William got a volume of Tennyson and began to read it, seeking to discover the virus hidden therein that he might perfect an antidote for it and restore Minerva's mind to normalcy. And she did about the same with regard to Byron. Neither had any idea that they themselves might become infected. And it would not have made any difference if they had realized the danger. They were hero and heroine. It is highly proper to take some risk for the sake of the person you want to marry—and each felt they could not get along through life without the other.

After about two weeks of Tennyson—picking out the poems with the most love in them and reading them over and over—William suddenly one day had a new idea. "Jimmy crickets!" cried he, his culture slipping from him like a bathrobe, "I really believe there is such a thing as love. But what is it? Pure Reason certainly has nothing to do with it." It was at just about the same time that Minerva caught herself repeating those lines of Byron, "Oh, Love! what is it in this world of ours that makes it fatal to be loved?"—and stopped with a gasp of apprehension. Love? oh, if William had not been so obstinate about that little matter of sociology how he might help her to comprehend, through his clear, cool mind, what was puzzling her so. She was alarmed at her own mental condition. She found herself unconsciously regarding love as an actuality when any schoolgirl could see that it was absolutely opposed to Pure Reason.

Yes, in spite of their little difference she must have the benefit of William's assistance in considering this matter—and she wrote to him a very plain letter so stating. She had come to the conclusion, she said, that there was a possibility of such a thing as love existing, and she would be obliged if William would write her an essay stating now, if he considered such a thing to be possible, the said actuality called love could be reconciled with Pure Reason.

William's answer was brief and to the point: "It can't be," he wrote, "and that is the beauty of it. I am coming 'round to see you tonight."

Now and Then

Because she would insist on eating with her fingers instead of using her fork, little Mary Frances' hands had been smacked several times at the meal. When she told her mother that she could not eat unless she used her fingers, her mother pushed Mary Frances' plate away and threatened to put her to bed without supper.

Being deprived of food was too big a sacrifice to her, and she told her mother that she would eat with her fork if she might remain at the table. "All right, then," said her mother, "you may finish your meal."

"All right," said Mary Frances, "but with my fork now and when I grow up I eat with my fingers."

POLLYANNA WILL BE AT HIGH SCHOOL

Wednesday and Thursday, January 19 and 20, a cast selected from the students of the Circleville high school will present the play, "Pollyanna" in the high school auditorium.

The cast has practiced faithfully many weeks. The members have actually succeeded in recreating the true spirit of the play. The play supplemented by the High School orchestra will afford an evening's entertainment that will linger in one's memory for a long time.

Pollyanna, the "glad girl" laughs her tears away and cures a complete troupe of hypochondriacs and jolly Irish Nancy of her "cuss" words. The tone of the play is clean and wholesome, yet it is richly supplied with fun and an undercurrent of inspiring seriousness.

Tho the royalty on the play is fifty dollars, the admission rates are extremely reasonable; adults 40c and children 25c.

Mrs. Bell was asked to take the seat of honor where more rose petals and rice showered her. Then came Masters David Glick and Allen Anderson drawing a huge rose filled with presents and best wishes for the bride who in her pleasing manner responded to each guest for her gift.

No Great Mystery in This "Magic" Number

The mysteries of the number 3852 are arousing keen interest in Germany. It has been found that the year of your birth, your age, the year of your marriage, and the number of years of wedded life always add up to that number exactly.

The puzzle may seem bewildering at first, says Popular Science Monthly, but simple analysis reveals it to be based on the fact that the "magic number" is nothing more than 1926 doubled. The addition of the year of birth and the age, of course, always results this year in 1926. So will adding the year of marriage and the number of years married. Next year, obviously, the mysterious number will be 3854.

MEXICO SEIZES RICH ALIEN PROPERTY

CONFISCATORY LAW ENFORCED THEIR OIL LANDS TAKEN OVER

Calles Government Playing a Dangerous Hand Messing With Property of Foreigners—Confiscation Is a Sop To the Common People To Popularize His Administration—Catholic Revolt Is Crushed In the State of Coahuila—Priest Killed.

The first action in the Mexican courts over the new petroleum law—application for an injunction—has been initiated at Tampico by four American oil companies seeking protection of certain of their property rights. This course adopted by the oil companies has the complete support of the Mexican government, Attorney General Ortega said Sunday, adding that President Calles does not intend to place any obstacle in the path of the oil companies in having recourse to the courts.

Meanwhile the war department asserts that "the Catholic rebellion" has been crushed in the state of Coahuila and that rebels and bandits are being mopped up in other states about 100 of them having been killed in skirmishes in various sections in the last few days.

Tampico dispatches explain that the Mexican government's petroleum agency has granted to a third party, Aniceto Torres, a concession to certain lands of the Sinclair Oil Co., on which this company has not filed application for a renewal of the concession under the new petroleum law. The Sinclair company thereupon filed in the Tampico district court an "amparo," which the court provisionally accepted pending a subsequent ruling.

An amparo can take the form of a mandamus, or an injunction. It is an application for a short decree either ordering or restraining certain action and also can become equivalent to a writ of habeas corpus.

The Tampico dispatches also announce that the Aguila Transcontinental and Agwi companies have ceased work in the southern fields and have filed amparos because certain drilling permits have been cancelled.

No explanation is given, but it is assumed that the cancellations had been made effective because the companies had not complied with the law requiring application for the new concessions.

Sixty rebels have been killed in fights, according to the war department or newspaper dispatches, by the federals at several points in the state of Coahuila. The federals, it is declared, captured anti-government pronouncements signed by the league for the defense of religious liberty and Rene Capistran Garza, the league leader who was recently said to have been proclaimed provisional president of Mexico and appeals to "the army of Christ and King."

Thirty or 40 rebels have been killed by the federals in several engagements in the state of Jalisco. Press dispatches report that one Catholic priest was found among the dead.

Mexico City newspapers give the great prominence to all dispatches showing opposition anywhere in the world to the United States Nicaraguan and Mexican policies, and print much editorial comment from the United States.

Special dispatches from Merida, Yucatan, describes a great mass meeting which endorsed the foreign and domestic policies of President Calles and cheered enthusiastically when the governor of Yucatan attacked the policy of the United States in Latin America. He declared that "Mexicans would rather die than be enslaved by Wall street."

A national political campaign practically has been started thru the activity of the friends of the former President General Obregon, who are organizing in many places with the object of electing Obregon to the presidency to succeed Calles. This adds to the generally unsettled condition of the country. Most of the Mexican City newspapers declare that the country has sufficient turmoil on its hands at present and that it is premature to enter upon a presidential campaign.

The present controversy over oil rights in Mexico "arises directly from the efforts and purposes of the Mexican government to despoil the American owners of these properties and rights" declares the Association of Producers of Petroleum in Mexico in a letter to Senator Burton K. Wheeler in Washington.

The letter, which is signed by Guy Stevens, director of the association, was in answer to statements which have been attributed to the senator in the course of discussion on the Latin-American situation.

No American companies are operating in Mexico under "concessions," the letter asserts, but under positive ownership thru purchase or lease of oil lands prior to 1917. At that time ownership of petroleum deposits was held by owners of the land under Mexican laws then in force.

The issue presented to the U. S. government in 1918 is revived in the recent action of the Mexican president the association's director contends. He characterizes the move as a step in the Mexican government's purpose to "consummate the spoliation thru the enactment of the present petroleum law."

President Wilson's declaration in 1918 to President Carranza, "calling the attention of the Mexican government to the necessity which may arise to impel it (the American government) to protect the property of its citizens in Mexico divested or injuriously affected by the decree," is cited.

Mr. Stevens offers to furnish any information which the senator may desire, or to go to Washington to discuss the situation.

A similar letter, setting forth the same declaration, was sent to Senator J. Thomas Heflin of Alabama.

Little Cannibalism Now

Cannibalism still exists in some tropical countries, but is limited to the area comprising the country 10 degrees north and south of the equator. It is found among isolated South American tribes, in West Equatorial and Central Africa, the Malay archipelago, certain South Sea islands, mainly in Melanesia, and in parts of Australia. Head hunting tribes are found in Madagascar.

Don't Count on an Encore

N. W. writes: "Keep something in reserve. Many performers make their biggest hit on an encore." That looks pretty clever, but we don't know exactly to apply it in actual life. One's best ticks are often none too good; we should say, rather: Put the finest that's in you in everything you do. You may not get an encore, anyway.—Boston Transcript.

GEORGE YOUNG CRAWLSTROKE SWIMMER WON

Only One to Finish 22 Mile
Derby and Will Get the $25,000 Prize.

George Young, 17 year old crawl-stroke artist of Toronto, Canada, who made his way to California on a motorcycle to participate in the William Wrigley marathon swim across the San Pedro channel, offset the chilling waters of the passage with a flashing stroke of speed that averaged 54 minutes to win the deep sea Derby in 15 hours and 45 minutes.

He was the only finisher in the field of 102 official contestants in the race which started at 11:21 a. m. Saturday at the isthmus of the northeastern edge of Santa Catalina island.

Sunday morning at 3:06 o'clock he gained the rock-storm shores of Point Vicente, a short distance north.

Veterans of long distance and channel swimming fame fell by the wayside overcome by the frigid waters of the channel, but this youthful marvel holder of the Canadian amateur long distance championship, continued his speedy stroking across the 22-mile course to the triumph and a $25,000 prize offered by Wrigley for the first man to cross.

BOOTLEGGERS HOOTCH GUN LATEST THING

It appears that each week ushers in an addition to the bootleg industry. The latest is the "three-shot" hooch-gun.

It is made to resemble perfectly a blue steel automatic pistol and will hold three man sized shots of liquor.

It was introduced by a man who strolled into a downtown restaurant in Cleveland and levelled the gun at an unsuspecting waiter. The waiter fled in alarm, only to be greeted by a shout of derisive laughter as the man divulged the contents of the pistol.

It is believed the gun is manufactured by the makers of the whisky "tester," a device used in determining whether whisky is pure or poisonous.

PARALYSIS.

John R. Miller, 74, of Columbus, formerly of this city, suffered a stroke of paralysis last Wednesday and his condition is critical. Mr. Miller is a brother-in-law of Mrs. William Crisinger, of this city.

M'CULLOUGH RE-ELECTED.

Outlook for next year's business are exceedingly bright, McCullough said, in view of the $34,000,000 assets in the company and the policy of the company since its founding.

Directors of Friday's meeting, whose terms did not expire this year and who continue to hold office, were C. C. Guthrie, Frank Rathmell, George W. Knight, B. C. Blachley, Fred C. Rector, W. J. Wilber, Dr. A. O. Ross and Elmer Jones.

Bureau Makes Record in Measurement of Time

Washington.—The measurement of time to an accuracy of from one to two hundred thousandths of a thousand has been effected by the bureau of standards.

The measurement is ten times as fine as obtained by any previous method, bureau experts said. In physics research the measurement is believed to be of great value, as it is estimated that light travels nearly two miles in one hundred thousandth of a second.

A tuning fork, a pendulum swinging in a vacuum, a photoelectric cell, an oscillograph or tiny mirror mounted on two wires in a strong magnetic field, and a high speed camera constituted the measuring apparatus.

New "Spender"

PROPERTIES OF CANNERIES AT AUCTION

Sears & Nichols Plants at
Sale Bring Only Half of
Their Estimated Value.

At the foreclosure sale of the Ohio properties owned by the Sears & Nichols Canning company, held in the probate court room, Saturday, John E. Morley, Cleveland attorney representing the First Mortgage Bondholders' Protective committee was sold the following mortgaged properties on the bid as stated, subject to confirmation by U. S. District Judge Benson Hough.

Washington C. H. plant, $60,000; Circleville, Ohio, plant $100,000; Chillicothe factory, including Main street plant, warehouses on Riverside and Race street, $175,000; Frankfort plant $30,000, total bidding of $365,000. The committee bids were all at the upset price, the figures fixed by the court as the minimum the plants must bring.

The "upset" price on the plants as an entirety was $485,000.

The Protective committee made the following offers for personal property to be submitted to the court for approval: Washington C. H., $8,872; Circleville, $15,699; Chillicothe, $19,182; Frankfort, $5,188; Central Supply store, Chillicothe, $8,205; general office supplies $9,431; labels, advertising good will, trade-marks and patent rights, $40,000. The good will had an estimated value of $50,000. These offers were approximately fifty per cent of the estimated value, but the actual sale is held pending the approval of the court. They total $106,777, the personality upset figure being $245,000.

If the court confirms the above sales and the offers for personal property, the first mortgage bondholders intend operating their plants themselves, providing financial arrangements can be made to raise sufficient working capital. Confirmation would mean that the above plants pass into the ownership of some 400 bondholders. They are contemplating no re-sale of the properties, if awarded to them, but will undertake the operation thru their own organization.

Judge Benson Hough of the U. S. district court Saturday ordered a continuance of the foreclosure sale of Sears & Nichols Ohio properties to January 29, at the Chillicothe courthouse 10 a. m.

Calamus Tea Was Served

By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS

(Copyright.)

"WHAT was Joe Babson hullo-in' about?" Mrs. Main asked eagerly.

Eve Nelson tried to answer casually: "Oh! Nothin' much! Just askin' if we had a stray red yearlin' in our pasture." But in spite of herself her eyes fell.

Whereat Mrs. Main said: "Humph! You're a sleazy liar. He brung you a somethin' of some sort. What was it? Answer me straight!"

"Nothin' but a bunch of calamus-root," Eve stammered.

"Calamus!" Words cannot express Mrs. Main's scorn. "Are ye goin' ter learn ter chaw it? I'll warn Sam Birdsong he better look sharp. With this calamus-dope a-workin', you might say yes ter the wrong feller."

Eve stiffened. "You'll please let me and my concerns be," she said. "Remember, I'm your boarder—and the best part of your livin'. Also, I don't have to stay on here any longer than suits me. I can marry if I choose, and I don't have to take Sam Birdsong."

"Ye can, eh! Of all the ingratitude ever I heard tell of, you're the beat," Mrs. Main flung back. "When you'd a-died in yer cradle, after yer mamma went hadn't a-been I taken and raised ye up ter real human size."

"Sure you did," Eve scoffed. "Paid your rent that way. The place is mine. You agreed to raise me right, feed, cloth and school me, if I was let stay until I married. And I didn't know a word about it until a month back—thought you paid money rent and got it back and more for keepin' me."

"How come you ter git so wise, missy?" Mrs. Main demanded angrily.

Eve tossed her head. "I went to Judge Johnson," she said. "Told him how you nagged and complained of my appetite, and how I wore out shoes, and asked him to find me another guardian. Then he told me about the bargain—says he can't go back on it—but the minute I show him a husband worth havin' he'll put me in possession. How'd you like that?"

In answer came a volcanic eruption—reproaches, appeals to high heaven, torrents of abuse, at last violent hysterics. Then Mrs. Main collapsed—fell to the floor in a dead faint. Eve tried dashing cold water in the unconscious face. Desperately she ran to the kitchen adjoining, and to her joy found a teakettle boiling. Suddenly she struck something hard in the pocket of her house frock—the despised calamus. In a wink she had a potful brewing. Three minutes later she was pouring tiny spoonfuls of it through her patient's lips. But an angel couldn't have been welcomer than Billy Bellamy, who came in without ceremony after a glance through the window. Billy was reading medicine with old Doctor Ware. He was also fathoms deep in love with Eve, but had never until now had the ghost of a chance to say so.

"The Lord sent you, I do believe," she said fervently to Billy. "I was scared poor Mammy Main would die—with only me to help her."

"You're doin' just the right thing," Billy assured her. "Now we'll lift her to the lounge."

"Wait. I must do somethin' before she comes to," Eve said with half a giggle.

She nodded. "It's only this: Propose to you—in dead earnest—while I have the chance."

Billy all but staggered. Perhaps that was why he had to prop himself with both arms around Eve. Warned by a groan, they sprang apart—and spent the next half hour trying breathlessly to do all the things Mammy Main insisted must be done at once.

The first was to bring forth black-berry cordial. Such a mission required two for fulfillment. Even at that it was tedious. At last Billy found the right jug. Eve, peering beyond him, reached for something odd—a canvas-wrapped parcel so heavy she could not move it with one hand. Billy drew it to the light. Both scanned it narrowly, then laid it back and hurried to Mrs. Main, trying hard to look as though they had not seen it.

They found her shaky, but she sniffed the pungent odor gratefully, saying in a weak voice: "Eve I got my come-uppance fer—fer talkin' mean ter you. I do believe I'd a-died hadn't of been fer that calamus tea."

"I won't forget," Billy said gaily. "When I want to bring the dead to life—try calamus tea. But here's somethin' even better, handin' her a glass of the thick spiky peach brandy, at least twenty years old."

"It does put heart in ye," Mrs. Main said almost dreaming, after a swig and several sips. Suddenly she looked hard at both the young folk—something in their faces stirred her strangely. "Did—did—you find—anything else?" she asked brokenly through quivering pallid lips. Eve took her hand, patted it and said: "Never mind if we did—we left things as we found them."

"They can't stay so," Mrs. Main cried, sitting up. "I got to tell the truth. In that leather bag, inside the canvas, is money—my rent for nineteen years. I cheated you—pinching so to save it—but I couldn't endure to go bare and empty-handed when I had to leave."

"You are not going to leave," Eve said softly. And Billy nodded assent.

Would We, Though?

"Just think what we'd be missing," said he, "if that delighted Discoverer of kissing Had had it copyrighted."

The Obvious

"Doc," growled the man who had been put on a diet, "why do you always order a fellow to cut out the things he likes?"

"Because," snapped the doctor, "he never eats or drinks the things he doesn't like, so it stands to reason it must be the things he does like that are disagreeing with him."

Tribulations of Childhood

"How old is that boy?" the conductor asked.

"Four," said the father.

"Four? Huh, he looks eight," replied the conductor.

"Well," came back the fond parent, "can I help it if he worries?"

Useless

"So you broke your engagement, Dolly?"

"Yes, just imagine; he didn't even have time to go swimming Wednesday and Fridays."

RAN WITH THE SWELLS

"And what makes that common sailor so proud and haughty?" "Long association with the swells."

Adam's Roast

"Ed like to get an Adam's roast?" "The butcher's face grew red. 'I've never heard of such a thing.' 'A single rib,' she said."

Conceded That Much

"So you were at the church. I suppose the bride looked charming." "Oh, certainly—to the groom, anyway."

Fanciful Elsie

"What do the stars remind you of, Elsie?" "Dandelions; they pop out all over."

If you want to look at solid facts of a thing, you must strain off the sentiment first.
